

FLOOD WATERS RACE SOUTHWARD FROM EVERY TRIBUTARY OF VAST REGION IN THE NORTH; MENACE PAST IN THE NORTH

Southland is Next to Face Scourge — Muddy Ohio Waters Approach Cincinnati, Forcing 100 Families to Evacuate Homes — Reconstruction Work Under Way in Pennsylvania Cities

(By International News Service)

From every tributary of a vast region in the north and east, flood waters raced southward today.

Northward, the flood menace apparently was definitely past, as flood-stricken areas from the Ohio River to the Atlantic Seaboard buried their dead, and succored the living, and began the long task of rehabilitation.

It is the southland that faces the scourge of the floods.

The muddy Ohio River swept over its banks as the flood crest approached Cincinnati this morning, and forced 100 families to evacuate their homes.

In the north, reconstruction work got well under way. Partial electric power was restored in Pittsburgh, where crews were cleaning up the Golden Triangle. Similar work was being directed in Johnstown and other cities in southeastern Pennsylvania.

Rivers in New York were receding last night. In the Birmingham area, hard hit by the overflowing Chenango and Susquehanna rivers, industrial plants resumed operations, and were approaching normalcy.

Red Cross workers and Welfare agencies were caring for New England's homeless thousands. Many still faced prospects of further high water.

Hartford, Connecticut, began reconstruction work today. All WPA workers were inoculated against typhoid. Electric power was restored on a skeletonized basis.

At Washington, governmental agents went into high gear to aid flood sufferers. Appropriations ranging up to $1,000,000,000 for relief and rehabilitation loans to individuals and industrial sufferers were proposed. Authorization was granted for assignment of WPA and CCC workers to flood-stricken areas.

Army experts pointed out that if the flood had occurred in war time, procurement plans for supplying the American army would have been seriously hampered.

PITTSBURGH, Mar. 23.—(INS)—Driven by an indomitable fighting spirit, Pittsburgh was slowly winning its battle today for resurrection from the ravages of the greatest flood in its history.

Electric service was restored to 80% of the city's consumers, although the great triangle business section downtown and heavy industries were still lacking this life-blood of a modern age. There was food aplenty for all and none went hungry as Red Cross trucks and volunteers sped it to all sections of the flood-ravished area.

The water supply was normal although residents were urged to boil water before drinking. A new cheering note was the announcement that mail service would resume momentarily as soon as the electric output is sufficient to run elevators and the vast mail sorting and delivery machinery.

As telegraph wires hummed new orders across the country, thousands of trucks bearing materials for Pittsburgh's reviving industry sped through the city streets to stores, office buildings and factories.

HARRISBURG, Mar. 23.—(INS)—Hopes of a flood-stricken state for Federal funds to aid in rehabilitation work rested with Gov. George H. Earle and other Commonwealth officials today as they journeyed to Washington, D. C., for a conference with Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator.

While 50,000 WPA workers and an equal number of volunteers started the job of clearing away the debris in more than 29 communities of 18 Pennsylvania counties ravaged by last week's flood waters, the Governor and his entourage left for the national Capital seeking a federal allocation of $10,000,000.

The funds have been requested for rehabilitation and flood relief work to aid in providing direct relief for additional thousands made homeless and left without work, and to launch a road repair program. Relief rolls are expected to mount as a result of the floods until the reconstruction program is under way.

If the money can be obtained for relief purposes, it was indicated, the expected call for a special session of the Legislature can be deferred for a time. If, on the other hand, the Governor's request is turned down, however, it is expected to be called.

George Brown received a plaque as being the best speller from Bristol high school. Others on the team were: Dorothy Abrams, Jean Rosser, Louis Lupkin, Harriet Green. The alternates, ready to take part if needed, were: Dorothy Downing, and Evelyn Greenwood.

Bristol Consolidated firemen were called out yesterday to fight a grass fire in the fields along North Radcliffe street.

Due to a short circuit, street lights were out in Bristol from two o'clock Sunday morning until seven o'clock last evening.

Entertainment Given After Meeting of the D. of A.

The Daughters of America, Council No. 58, held a meeting Friday evening in F. P. A. hall. Following the meeting, a few members entertained by giving "Major Bowes Hour."

Those taking part: Mrs. Harry Hinman, Major Bowes; Miss Ethel Keers, solo, "Lights Out"; Mrs. Leonard Fenton, recitation; Mrs. Paul Marsh, recitation, "Clancey's Wooden Wedding"; Janice Jeffries, Betty Lovett and Violet Keers, trio, "Red Sails in the Sunset," accompanied by Miss Ethel Keers; Mrs. Warren Thompson, recitation "Bride's First Trip to the Butcher Shop"; Mrs. Jennie Deiterick, cornet solo, "The Music Goes Round and Round"; Mrs. Lester Shire, Irish reel; Mrs. Clifford Foster, Mrs. Antone Terreson and Mrs. Joseph Keers, with Mrs. Allen Lebow as leader, formed the German Band; Mrs. Melvin Vandine, recitation; Mrs. Edward Renk, imitating Kate Smith, "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain"; Mrs. Hinman, as Major Bowes, sang "Sweet Adeline."

A covered dish social followed.

METHODISTS RAISE $1350 IN FOUR MONTHS

"White Elephant" is Taken From Church at Service Yesterday

A GREAT SUCCESS

With real cause for rejoicing over the success of plans, which at first seemed impossible of accomplishment, the congregation of the Bristol Methodist Church arose to their feet at the church service held yesterday morning and sang with fervor, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Last fall, the trustees of the church were confronted with a deficit of $900. This deficit was made up largely of local bills. The regular income was insufficient to pay the current bills, and it was realized that the situation called for an unusual effort, if the debt was to be cancelled.

The fact that the debt was a "white elephant" and that from a financial standpoint the church was "in the red," gave rise to a thought, which after some amplification was decided upon as a plan for raising funds.

A large frame, seven by eight feet, was made and the space inside the frame was painted red. Upon this red background was fastened a large white elephant, which had been divided into sections. The tusks were divided into 25 subscriptions, the head and trunk represented 10 subscriptions and the body contained 55 subscriptions. The sections on the front legs sold for $2 each, those on the hind legs at $1 each and those on the tail at 50c each. The toe-nails were priced at 25c each. Altogether, if all the subscriptions were sold, the total subscriptions would amount to over $1100.

With a measure of trepidation and much doubt as to the outcome, the elephant was installed in the front part of the church edifice, and one Sunday morning last November a drive for subscriptions was begun. To the surprise of everyone, over $700 was promised. From this beginning the drive became intensive and one in which every department of the church and Sunday School participated.

Each week as the sections were sold they were painted a dark gray, and in a little while the white elephant began to change into gray. Yesterday morning was the time set for the removal of the elephant from the church auditorium. Over $1000 in subscriptions had been paid in cash, and the unpaid subscriptions amounted to only $25. But some of the one-dollar subscriptions on the hind legs and a few

CROYDON

A surprise party was given David Findley at his home Friday night by the choir of St. Luke's Lutheran Church in honor of his birthday. An enjoyable evening included music, singing, games and a lunch. Those present were: the Rev. and Mrs. T. Kohlmeier and son, Mr. and Mrs. George Strickler, Misses Lee Foerster, Henrietta Schrenk, Mary, Josephine and Ann Mae Horner; Messrs. Frederick Ramus, John Hambling; Mr. and Mrs. Koehler, Mrs. Conway Keeney, Robert and Harold Findley, Mrs. D. Findley, Adolph Kornfeld, Conway Keeney, Jr.

On Saturday evening a kitchen shower was given Miss Lee Foerster, River Road, by the Good Samaritans of St. Luke's Lutheran Church. Miss Foerster was the recipient of many presents. A repast was served to 25 guests.

Mrs. Austin Deen is suffering from a broken arm, she having tripped on a step.

HULMEVILLE

Miss Alice C. Smith, Concord, N. C., arrived yesterday at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haefner, for a visit. Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, Sunbury, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Wesley Haefner.

The Hulmeville W. C. T. U. will meet on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. Hugh B. Webster.

TOMORROW NIGHT IS THE TIME FOR THE OPENING OF THE BIG COURIER COOKING SCHOOL HERE

Every Woman of the Vicinity is Invited to Attend the Free Sessions on Home-Making and Cookery Conducted by Mrs. Edna Riggs Crabtree—Doors Open at Seven o'Clock—Lecture Begins at Eight o'Clock

Good cookery has made more happy homes than Paris gowns. Well planned meals of healthful, nourishing foods have saved more lives than rest cures and hospitals. Succulent dishes make brighter eyes and prettier complexions than a shelf full of cosmetics; these are some of the maxims of Mrs. Edna Riggs Crabtree who begins her exciting big Cooking School tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in Bristol M. E. Church lecture room.

Those under 18 years of age will not be admitted and are requested not to attend. No gifts awarded to those under the age limit.

The final preparations for the Courier Cooking School are under way. Foods in boxes and crates have been delivered to the kitchen. The dairy products, fruits, loaves of bread and bags of flour and other good things are arriving, refrigerator and range are connected and everything is in readiness for the opening at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening.

This final preparation is in the capable hands of Mrs. Crabtree. She has conducted Cooking Schools before thousands of American women; she has been trained in sound Home Economics principles and has a long practical experience as homemaker and housekeeper; she has traveled widely to inform herself of new developments in the laboratories of the great American manufacturers and in the laboratories of schools and colleges where new developments and discoveries add new interest to home-making, every year. Mrs. Crabtree brings the results of her schooling, traveling and long experience as a lecturer to the women of this section tomorrow. She speaks with enthusiasm for she believes in the vital importance of good cookery. She has charm and poise as well, which endear her to the thousands of women who have heard her in other cities. Every recipe, in the many good ones she will prepare and give out tomorrow and on the following days of the School, is a product of her fine experience as a housekeeper and home economics specialist.

Mrs. Crabtree's stage kitchen represents the newest wares of the merchants of Bristol for the modern labor-saving and time-saving equipment demanded by this homemaker authority is to be found right here in the shops of our city.

With all of this fine equipment and abundance of groceries, Mrs. Crabtree's message is to be directed to the

FIRE AT PENN'S MANOR DAMAGES PROPERTY

Dwelling Occupied by James Purcell is Considerably Damaged

PUA LOSS AT $3,000.00

TULLYTOWN, Mar. 23.—A two and one-half story dwelling owned by the Warner Company and occupied by James Purcell and family was considerably damaged by fire yesterday afternoon at Penn's Manor.

Fire companies from Morrisville and Tullytown responded to the call and did very good work. Both companies had their pumps in operation but the fire had gained much headway.

The blaze it is believed was caused by the chimney and was discovered by Harry Sterling, Jr. Sterling first notified the Purcell and then drove to the packing house of the King's Farms where word was telephoned to both Morrisville and Tullytown firemen.

The attic floor and the second floor were gutted and one side of the dwelling was considerably burned. It is estimated that the loss will reach $3,000.

NAMED TO COLLECT RED CROSS FUNDS

Money is Needed Quickly to Aid Those in Flooded Area

DONATIONS ARE URGED

Action and money are vital immediate needs for flood relief. Bristol is responding quickly to the call. As the awful results of flood are pictured in the daily press and broadcast over the radio, Bristol on the water's edge has been spared. The unfortunate must be aided.

No one is authorized in this area to collect money for the Red Cross, except the members of the Bristol Branch, who are named below:

Mrs. Frederick I. Kraft, 249 Radcliffe street.
Mrs. Frank Lehman, 316 Radcliffe street.
Miss Frances Landreth, 715 Radcliffe street.
Mrs. Horace N. Davis, 323 Otter street.
Miss Mary Wilkinson, 921 Beaver street.

Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn, Pine Grove.
Mrs. Henry H. H. Poole, 101 Jefferson avenue.
Mrs. Joseph McCarron, 1238 Pond street.

Mrs. George W. Wright, Tullytown.
Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes, Edgely.
Mrs. George Garretson, Edgely.
Mrs. William Lovett, Emille.
Mrs. Earl Tomb, Bath Road.
Mrs. Horace Fleckenstine, Newportville.

Miss Margaret R. Grundy, West Bristol.
Mrs. Carl Wenzel, Fairview Lane.
Mrs. H. Fredericks, State Road, Croydon.

The above are the persons authorized to collect money for flood relief and have been so designated by Mrs. Joseph B. Smith, chairman of the Bristol Branch of the Red Cross.

Donations of canned goods or clothing may be sent to the Municipal Building, Pond street, or to the American Legion Home, 619 Radcliffe street.

Mrs. Harry G. Frederick, will be at the Croydon Fire Company station this afternoon between the hours of one and five, and tomorrow between nine a. m. and five p. m., to accept money, canned goods, clothing and blankets, for use for flood victims. This collection is under jurisdiction of the Red Cross. Articles will be collected if a message is telephoned to Bristol 7381. Croydon Boy Scouts are aiding in the work.

Group of Friends Gather At Home of Harley Davies

Harley Davies, 316 Jackson street, was host Saturday evening to a group of friends at his home.

Dancing, games and refreshments were enjoyed by the Misses Jane Koch, Dorothy Mulholland, Phyllis Werner, Charlotte Rathke, Anita Zug; Wayne Mulholland, Joseph Kallenbach, Oscar Booz, Howard Baker.

Ivor Roslund Hangs Self in Basement of Home

A resident of St. Leonards, Northampton Township, ended his life Saturday by hanging.

The victim is: Ivor Roslund, aged 42 years.

The deceased, a native of Sweden, resided on the Buck Road, and was a rose grower at Sodano's Greenhouses. It is stated that the man was temporarily deranged. He was married, and in addition to his wife, one child survives.

The lifeless body was discovered by Mrs. Roslund, in the basement of their home, at 8.30 a. m.

Dr. James Lawler, Bristol, deputy coroner of Bucks County, viewed the body.

FIREMEN PUMP OUT YARDLEY CELLARS; HAUL FRESH WATER

Seven Fire Companies Remove Water From 100 Cellars During Week-End

WOMEN PREPARE MEALS

Four Pumps From Public Utilities Also Aid In the Work

YARDLEY, Mar. 23.—With the aid of seven fire companies, flood-water from the Delaware River was pumped from approximately 100 cellars in this borough during the week-end.

The volunteers with each of the companies averaged 10 men; and in addition to the pumps put into use, Trevose Fire Company placed in service its tank truck which hauled fresh, pure water to the residents.

The week-end locally proved one full of good deeds, and the firemen were unstinting in their time and efforts. Some spent two days in the borough, others were on the job bright and early yesterday morning, and remained until last evening.

The women of the two auxiliaries in this borough found they had some hungry men to feed, and willingly prepared two hot meals, one at noon and another last evening, and thus cared for the "inner" firemen at the Municipal Building.

The seven pumps of the fire companies were augmented by four pumps from public utilities, making 11 in all. The stretch of territory from the canal to the river was cared for, water being pumped from cellars from River-mawr to the railroad bridge.

In some instances water was four feet high, and ranged down to 18 inches. Every available ditch, gutter and piece of idle lowland was utilized for an outlet for the muddy water which poured into the basements during the time the Delaware River was flooded last week, when many sections of the town were inundated.

The following volunteer companies were directed in the work by the chiefs here named: Cornwells Heights, Harold H. Dettmer; Croydon, Leonard Morgan; Hulmeville, Thomas B. Schatt; Langhorne, Charles Praul; Newtown, Charles Irvin; Yardley, Louis C. Leedom; Trevose, L. Roberts.

Farical Fun Is Feature Of Lloyd's "Milky Way"

A hurricane of laughter blows through town today and tomorrow in Harold Lloyd's new Paramount farce, "The Milky Way," at the Grand Theatre.

Lloyd is seen as a humorless, shy, ineffectual boob of a milkman whose only aim in life is to deliver more milk bottles to more customers. When a drunken fight champion takes a swing at the milkman, an adept at ducking, and knocks himself out (how it happens is the funniest thing that has been seen in many a moon), the milk-bottle boy takes the credit for the victory and is launched as a contender for the middleweight championship.

There is not a single moment in the picture without its generous quota of laughs.

TRIBUTE TO OUR SCHOOLS

So often are American schools compared unfavorably with those of Europe, it comes as a refreshing change to see the opposite view taken.

When the one making this comparison is the eminent scientist, Professor Einstein more than ordinary interest attach to it.

Dr. Einstein thinks American schools have at least one distinct advantage over the schools of Europe. The initiative and independence of pupils are preserved more successfully here, he says, and this, in his opinion, should be one of the chief purposes of schools.

"What one must demand from the school in the first place," he explains, "is something negative. It should not suppress in the young a feeling of independence, of the joy of living, a personal initiative and the urge for knowledge."

"This most important demand the schools of the United States fill in most satisfactory manner, in contrast to the schools of the greater part of Europe."

American schools recently have come in for much criticism. Some of this no doubt they deserve, but not all of it.

The tribute paid them by Dr. Einstein should serve to direct attention to their better side.

HARD WINTERS AHEAD!

An eminent meteorologist goes on record with the prediction, or threat, that we are starting on a cycle of hard winters.

Studying the hard winter just concluded, he has traced it back to certain more or less probable causes. Those causes, which were powerful enough to bring one hard winter, will be powerful enough, he assumes, to bring a long succession of them.

It sounds logical, but we beg to remain unconvinced.

It is true that we have just passed through a hard winter. It is also true, however, that previously we passed through a whole series of mild winters. Why deduce from a single piece of evidence that we are starting a cold cycle, instead of deducing from several accumulated pieces of evidence that we are starting a warm cycle?

The single cold winter came most recently and therefore, leaving the strongest impression, might naturally be expected to sway the judgment of the laity. But an expert should remember all the facts, both pro and con, and not go off half cocked.

One swallow doesn't make a summer. One cold winter doesn't make a cycle, or even start one.

Try naming one actual benefit derived from the airplane by anybody except undertakers.

You can say one thing for the bandit. He doesn't fool his conscience by calling it ethical.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Sept. 17, 1874. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The Bristol public schools are now supplied with a good selection of chemical and philosophical apparatus. An air pump, electrical machine, microscope, and numerous other instruments comprise the collection.

It is reported that negotiations are pending that will insure an early resumption of work on the Newtown Railroad.

A handsome new banking house to be occupied by S. C. Ball & Co., is about being erected in Hatboro.

The Bristol Friends' First-day School reopened on the 13th instant, with 13 teachers and 96 pupils, with 8 in the adult class.

It costs the County 93 cents a day to keep a prisoner in the Doylestown jail.

Last Thursday evening, the residence of David I. Mansides, on Otter street, took fire from locomotive sparks. The flames were soon extinguished.

A new school house in Bristol is badly needed. The basement of the school house on Wood street, the floor of which is four feet underground, and the ventilation very imperfect, is crowded to its utmost capacity with children.

Thomas Crooks, who resided on Market street, died suddenly on Tuesday morning of neuralgia of the heart. A few hours before his death, complaining of not feeling well, he laid down on a lounge, from which he fell, and before the arrival of a physician life was extinct.

Last Tuesday morning, about three o'clock, the Engine House was entered by some unscrupulous persons who sprung the bells upon the hose carriage, and caused a false alarm of fire. Charles E. Scott, Burgess, offers a reward of five dollars for information leading to the arrest of the guilty parties.

The hotel property at Newportville, estate of John G. Hibbs, deceased, has been sold to Isaac G. Morris for $3900. It is reported that Burtis Ma-bill is to be the landlord.

It is expected that at this court (Attleboro) will be incorporated into a borough.

HULMEVILLE—The drinking fountain to be erected by the Good Templars of Hulmeville, between this place and Newportville, has been ordered. It will be made of New-town brown stone.

The Neshaminy Creek at this place, has not been lower since 1838. The cotton factory, for the past two or three weeks, has run only at intervals, making about two full days in a week. The present rains are hailed with delight, and the prospect now is full time and full wages.

BRISTOL BOROUGH COUNCIL—

A stated meeting of the Borough Council was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening, 14th inst. Members present, Messrs. Charles E. Scott, Burgess A. L. Packer, C. W. Peirce, S. Pike, James M. Slack, David Stackhouse, Morton Walsley, Henry M. Wright, and J. Wesley Wright. An ordinance to extend and further lay out and open Bath, Lafayette, Pond and Wood streets, and an ordinance to lay out and open Locust, Spruce, Race and Swain streets, in the Borough of Bristol, were read and passed. An ordinance was passed appointing John Adams policeman for the Borough, at a salary of $25 per month.

A party of young men hired the yacht "Atlas" and started down the river at midnight of Sunday last, to see the race between the "Kleintz" and "Strimmel."

WARMINSTER—On Saturday, the 5th inst., Lewis Rorer, while engaged in repairing a carriage-house at his residence in Northampton township, fell through the floor, a distance of about eight feet, injuring his spine so that he died in a few days.

Edmund Lawrence is preparing to build two more comfortable residences on Penn street.

Captain Jesse B. Mears offers to take stock in the Water Company for his lot on Radcliffe street.

Yesterday evening Philip Yeager of this borough had a severe paralytic stroke in his saloon near the Market street wharf. His left side was totally paralyzed and the other partially affected. He was conveyed to his residence in a carriage, and died at 1 o'clock this morning.

CHAPTER XXIX

"It's just a question of specialization," said Gottlieb, struggling into his overcoat. "I specialized in business all my life. I don't mind telling you we have a big proposition here and we're going to put it over. There's a fortune in it, but if we aren't sharp it could easily turn out the wrong way around."

"If there's any way I can help," said O'Hara, "let me know."

"Nothing you can do at all," said Gottlieb, wrestling into an inner pocket for a cigar. "You and Juliet stay on the job and keep things humming. The man I've got to see is McSpadden. I'll probably keep him up all night estimating costs and production capacity. Mind losing a little sleep, Juliet?"

Katie caught her breath sharply. Juliet and Gottlieb were going out together without eating! O'Hara was holding a mannish coat for Juliet—blue and belted—while she slipped into it.

"Not at all," said Juliet. "Good! I want you sitting right there beside me while I get all the facts together," said Gottlieb. "A partner ought to know everything that's going on. How does it feel to be a rich woman?"

"I'm spending the money already," said Juliet happily.

"Don't spend it before you get it," Gottlieb granted. "But you'll have it before long—I'm telling you. We've picked a winner this time sure as you're alive."

O'Hara seemed slightly embarrassed. "If there's anything I can do, just let me know," he said awkwardly.

Juliet gave him an absent-minded smile. "Thank you so much. Wonderful, isn't it?"

They were out as eagerly as racers leaving the mark. Behind them was the mingled scent of Gottlieb's cigar and a faint fragrance from Juliet. A thrill, painfully pleasant, in Katie's breast kept rippling and rippling. She came into the room and stood quite close to O'Hara.

"You're going to stay and eat, aren't you?" she asked, remembering not to say "ain't."

O'Hara looked at her vaguely, and then by gradual stages became aware of an eagerness that was fairly radiating.

"I suppose I might as well, Katie," he said ruefully. "I don't seem to be needed in any other quarters this evening."

The violet blue in Katie's eyes darkened until it was almost black. Then, completely without premeditation, she spoke what was in her mind.

"Well, I need you this evening, and I want you, too! That's the way you stand with me, Mr. O'Hara." O'Hara blinked his eyes once. Heretofore he had been under the impression that Katie Schmidt was a sort of a child.

"Maybe I need you too, tonight, Katie," he blurted. "I suppose you saw how Juliet and Gottlieb walked right out on me?"

Katie squinted up her eyes indignantly. "Sure I saw it! They left you at home like you was the pet poodle. But don't you care! You got more brains than all of 'em combined."

"Thank!" said O'Hara, somewhat grimly. "I'm going to keep you right here and feed you. Look—could you go for a cocktail?"

"Could I?"

"You just sit down, and see what mamma brings you."

Katie lacked many social graces but she knew all about cocktails from much kitchen camaraderie with butlers in homes where she had worked. The lamb chops might be burnt, the vegetables soggy and the salad missing, but O'Hara, soon wrapped in a golden glow, was unaware of these deficiencies.

The potion mixed by Katie went straight to his humiliation and dissolved it.

It had been a long time since a girl as young and glittering as Katie had poured upon him so much adoration. It was a balm that saturated his wounds like a magic ointment. Drink by drink he approached the heights of Olympus.

"You're awfully crazy about Miss Juliet, aren't you?" asked Katie, with an amazing ability to keep on the main track.

"Not at all," said a dignified voice out of O'Hara.

"Yes you are too. Only, you don't know how to go about it. You oughta make her jealous."

"I'm afraid that would be a difficult job."

Yet a kind of incense arose from Katie's words—a pleasant fume that pictured Juliet sad-eyed and contrite. The thought gave him a languorous satisfaction.

And Katie, with her mind upon Juliet's peach-colored dinner gown hanging beside Juliet's lovely evening wrap, was visited by a brilliant temptation. A thrilling voice told her this was the night of nights.

"You oughta snap out of it, Mr. O'Hara. Speaking for myself—I love dancing." She concentrated her eyes and narrowed them like a marksman taking aim. "Look—I'll orchestra gibbered insane music, while pallid men and clinging girls revolved in a tightly packed mass under blue lights. Over everything hung the thick blue haze of cigarette smoke.

In the booth, Katie's bare shoulder was pressed against his sleeve. Juliet's peach-colored gown was cut alarmingly low in the back. One of the shoulder straps kept slipping conspicuously, and Katie kept fixing it.

"White Rock," O'Hara said to the waiter.

"We can have some food later," she chimed in. "Let's dance."

Katie's form was squeezed flatly against him as they were swallowed up in the medley of indifferent humanity. They might have been dancing alone in the place, so completely were they ignored by the

The music rose more boisterously than ever. Then, suddenly, Katie was softly yet firmly against him.

be your pal. Why don't you and me go to a night club?"

"Night club? The great American rendezvous for morons."

"Silly! You're only a young fellow yourself, really. I'll bet you're a swell dancer."

"I've forgotten how."

But Katie winked slyly. "I'll teach you—quick."

And O'Hara, amused and feeling his chest somehow filled with helium, observed that Katie was like a child in her eagerness for a little pleasure.

His eyes focused on the bright gleam of her platinum head. Downstairs his roaster was waiting at the curb willing and able to take them anywhere.

Actually it meant nothing to him what he did or where he went. At the moment he could conceive nothing more important than satisfying the eager questing in Katie's keen blue eyes behind their heavily darkened lashes.

Snuggled beside him in the roaster, the girl slipped a small warm hand into the hollow of his elbow; there was an exhalation so young and spontaneous and fragrant from her bright young body that he was surrounded with an aura of half-forgotten vibrations of a youth that belonged only to yesterday.

"Feel yourself coming to life?" whispered Katie.

A canopy stretched from a frowzy building to the curb. A uniformed servant led them through a guarded door. The ante-room airless and heavily perfumed, red carpets, mirrors in gilt frames...

A glassy blonde to check their wraps. Through a swarm of people—powdered backs and mascara—they were led to a darkened booth against the wall. An uproarious other preoccupied couples. Sometimes they were crushed intimately together by the eddying force of other bodies. They moved wordlessly. A binding current shuttling between them and uniting them as by some secret language of the body.

"You're wonderful," she said in a low voice.

"You're not bad yourself," he replied.

Back at the table, O'Hara's throat was hot and dry. He drank, and the liquid made a cool stimulated path down his interior.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked Katie who had sat noticeably apart from him in the gloom.

"Nothing," she said in a tight voice.

"Well, it looks like the evening's over," he observed, looking for a waiter.

For a moment he wondered if he had somehow offended her and he filled his glass again.

The music rose more boisterously than ever and the floor swarmed with dancers. Then, suddenly, Katie was softly yet firmly against him, her mouth eagerly hunting his lips and finding them in a prolonged abandonment that drowned out everything else. They danced no more.

After a time the orchestra ceased for the night and tired waiters began dismantling the tables.

"Where can we go now?"

"Home, I suppose," said O'Hara.

"All right," said Katie with her fingers in his hair and her cheek against his flushed face.

O'Hara tossed two twenty dollar bills on the table...

SEASON BRINGS OUT EXCELLENT VARIETY OF PRINT DRESSES

By Rhaden A. Armstrong
(Home Economics Representative)

It is time for a new dress—a gay colorful print. This will bring a touch of spring to the winter wardrobe. Later, when coats can be discarded, and with one's spring hat and accessories, it will be the basis for an entirely new costume. In fact, a print dress can be worn the year round.

It is at this season that prints make their first appearance. Each year they blossom in new designs (this year tiny animal motifs are new) and each year designs include large or small flowers, geometric designs, or paisley effects. Variations of the dot or check make an annual appearance.

Backgrounds in white or light colors are nice for hot weather or evening dresses, while black or dark colors are for more practical general wear. In any case the flower colors are bright and gay.

Designers, ever eager for new ideas, offered a prize this year for the best designs submitted by high school textile students. Eight manufacturers chose 12 of the best designs to be made up in pure dye silk. These are now being sold in the leading department stores.

In choosing a print, the average woman is especially mindful of the color and design factor in her choice. She wishes a becoming color, and one which will fit into the color scheme of her present wardrobe, if it is to be worn now with her winter coat. If not, what hat and accessories will she have to wear with it later?

She will choose a print which is flattering in its size of design. If quiet and retiring without striking color combinations in her skin, hair, and eyes, she will not choose a large pattern with strong color combinations, or strong light and dark contrasts, but will leave that for her more active, decisive sister.

Prints combined with plain materials are as popular as last year and very practical. This gives a fine opportunity to add some color to a dark costume, and also for combining new and used materials. A popular use of plain and print is in the redingote dress, a style especially pleasing for the figure inclined to be stout.

Other suggestions for the use of print are a blouse, the top of a plain dress, collar and cuffs, or scarf collars.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing for International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — The new evening dresses are now held up by a shoestring!

Shoulder straps are at their best now when just as narrow as they could possibly be, and made of the same material as the frock. In fact, I've seen more than one gown, here in Hollywood, that had no shoulder straps at all... with the bodice fashioned in the old corset type of silhouette.

This new trend was forcibly brought home to me the other night at a welcome-home party given for the newly-married Jack L. Warners. There was Joan Blondell, for instance, wearing a bouffant brown frock, cut very décolleté both front and back, with the tiny straps holding it up, and an old-fashioned pin finishing off the front. Her skirt also was trimmed with cut-out brown velvet circles, and a top-knot of brown velvet violets rested plunk on top of Joan's yellow head, while her hair was swept up off the ears.

Marion Davies, in black mouseline de soie, covered her narrow corsage straps with a flowing short cape, and wore also an off-the-face halo hat of black mouseline petals, and her famous Marquise diamonds.

Others displaying this new style were Kay Francis, in black satin gaily printed with bright flowers, under a silver fox cape; Doris Warner LeRoy, in a bouffant Irene Model of white faille taffeta, very wide as to skirt; Lady Plunkett, in white crepe, with slim silhouette; Aileen Pringle, in powder blue soufflé over a slip of wood... then it begins to look as if dusty pink sprinkled with gold flowers; and Dolores Del Rio, whose white slipper satin gown with its tiny straps was matched by a tailored white satin coat with a big bunch of white violets in the lapel.

As a final tidbit, you'll want to know what the bride wore. Well, the ever-smart Ann Warner was not only her usual chic self—but one part of her costume bids fair to set a new style in Hollywood. For her dress, of rose-beige crepe Romaine, draped round and caught with the two huge ruby diamond clips on the shoulder, was not only matched by enormous ruby and diamond bracelets done in squares, but she combined with these a veil... ganzy black net thrown over her jet black hair, sprinkled with tiny half-moons and sequins, and reaching to the tip of her nose in front as well as to the shoulders in the back. A stunning, Spanish stunt, and clever as can be on a woman with Ann Warner's pale skin and raven hair. But if a thousand blondes and brownettes don't try it too—I lose a bet!

HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 21 — (INS) — When you see dresses trimmed with fringe as often as five times in three days... in a town the size of Hollywood... then it begins to look as if we'd better pay attention to fringe.

That's what's happened to your dashing (hither and thither) correspondent. First to one party, then another—and all because styles change so lightning-fast at this time of year, it means keeping on the jump at all hours to stay abreast of them.

Well, at one party there was Norma Shearer... in white crepe, trimmed with rows and rows of fringe on the skirt and again on little cape, while the Spanish effect was continued through use of a red rose in the center of the bodice.

Spanish, also, was Dolores Del Rio, out dancing in another fringed white frock that had only one sleeve. I mean it slashed diagonally from the top of the right shoulder to under the left arm... and the fringe, swaying, went diagonally the same way, round and round the slender skirt.

Mrs. Buster Collier, at the party given by William Haines for the newly-wed Jack Warners, selected a formal gown of black crepe, with hand-knitted white fringe on the jacket, and wore white flowers in her hair.

Getting into daytime wear, fringe also is gaining a more and more important place, at witness the two suits worn by Margaret Lindsay in "The Law in Her Hands." Absolutely the highlight of a nubby tan tweed flecked in brown and yellow is a gold wool scarf... fringed, you guessed it, on the four edges. And on a navy wool suit, fringed epaulet shoulders are finished with heavy blue cord tassels.

With this costume, by the way, Margaret wears as accessories a high-necked white cotton blouse, navy blue silk poplin hat, stitch-trimmed, navy shoes and white gloves. And with the tan tweed, her smart accompaniments are brown gloves, saddle leather purse matching the oblong buttons on the jacket, brown suede pumps, and a brown felt derby with a veil.

Come early to get the best seats; plan to come every day, for not only are the gifts such as filled market baskets and cooked dishes given away each day but those who have been faithfully attending each session, have greater chances of carrying home the big gifts which the local merchants are contributing to the school.

The wonderful array of gifts to be given by the participating merchants is sure to attract a large crowd and these gifts have been very generously given by the merchants co-operating with the Courier in staging the cooking school.

Methodists Raise $1350 in Four Months

50c sections on the tail had not yet been sold. It was accordingly decided to make a final drive yesterday morning. After the drive, about $45 remained unsubscribed, which amount was assumed by the members of the board of trustees, and amid great rejoicing the elephant, which had now turned from white to gray, was carried out of the church edifice. The cash subscriptions amount to $1195, with $25 in pledges yet to be paid.

While the drive was in progress, the Sunday School raised $250 extra, to assist the trustees in paying for the coal used in heating the church building.

Firemen Pump Out Yardley Cellars; Haul Fresh Water

Pumps from the two Yardley companies were used.

The request for aid of the fire companies came from Mr. Leedom, chief at Yardley. It is expected that as soon as possible about 100 more basements will be thus cleared of water. Approximately one hour's work was required for each basement.

Additional emergency WPA workers were thrown into Bucks County communities along the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware river on Saturday in an effort to restore owners and their families to their living quarters, which they were forced to abandon during the flood.

Philip J. Hickey, field representative of the Federal Housing Administration, is organizing the work. After the work of pumping water from the cellars is finished and the mud is shoveled away the low-lying areas where flood waters remained trapped are to be drained by digging ditches leading toward the river.

It was announced that property owners who had suffered damage could obtain Federal Housing Administration loans up to $2,000 by making prompt application. The applications should be filed before next Saturday. More than 100 workers were engaged at Yardley on Saturday, taken from the Bucks County relief rolls. Forty men were scattered at points adjacent to the river between Yardley and Lamberville. Twenty men were at Upper Black Eddy.

In Morrisville every effort will be made to assist the family of George Bootherstone, whose home on Park avenue was washed down the river. This family was left not only homeless but all its furniture was lost when the bungalow was washed away.

Work of rehabilitation is being carried on in Morrisville by various agencies, under direction of Mayor Stockham. Many families were left in destitute circumstances but the Red Cross and the American Legion are coming to their aid. Food was purchased yesterday for a number of families by the Red Cross and last night a truck load of food and clothing was received here by the American Legion from State headquarters for distribution to the flood sufferers in Yardley and Morrisville. Distribution will be made by the Red Cross.

Besides forcing many families out and washing the Bootherstone home down the stream, the flood upset another home owned by Anthony Piehl, of Central avenue, undermined foundations of a number of homes, and damaged the furniture in many dwellings, not only on the island but on North Delmorr avenue as well. The water mains on the island were badly damaged and streets and sidewalks were left in a deplorable condition. It is estimated the water did at least $15,000 damage to the properties and more than $1,000 damage to streets and sidewalks.

The Red Cross has procured cots to be used temporarily in homes of neighbors who are now housing flood refugees. The Presbyterian Church has also been available for shelter.

Construction of a retaining wall in Morrisville from Calhoun street to the lower bridge was put forward yesterday as the best means of protecting that community from continued ravages of floodwaters at a town meeting called by Mayor Thomas B. Stockham. Morrisville's town meeting yesterday afternoon, attended by representatives of civic organizations, the school board, manufacturers, physicians and borough officials, voted to seek Federal aid for the erection of the retaining wall and also to petition Morrisville Common Council to purchase land on the island further away from the flood section and move the homes at the ends of Central and Park avenues which now suffer worst from high water to the new location.

A third measure voted by the meeting was to seek aid from the State Highway Department to elevate North Delmorr avenue from Palmer street to the township line on the north, in order to protect homes on the west side of the avenue.

If the plan for purchasing ground on the island is carried out, the borough will take title to the property vacated by residents on the ends of Park and Central avenues and establish a river front park. Mayor Stockham was urged at the meeting to appeal to Governor Earle for State or Federal funds to pay for the moving of the affected homes and the erection of cellars and foundations that would be involved.

Many of those who were driven from their homes during the recent flood were present at the meeting and problems of immediate relief and rehabilitation to damaged properties were also discussed. A telegram was received from Governor Earle urging the community to appeal for cash contributions to the Red Cross to take care of immediate emergencies.

PLAY-OFF SERIES TO GET UNDER WAY HERE

The first game of the play-off series to determine the championship of the Bristol Amateur Basketball League will take place tonight on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. The Moose Musketeers, winners of the second half, will clash with the Odd Fellows, first half champions. In the preliminary game, the Bristol League All-Stars will play a team composed of the managers and directors of the loop.

The Odd Fellows captured the first half championship after a tough tussle down the home stretch with the Moose and the Third Ward team. The Moose twice beat the Rangers to win the second half title. The teams are very evenly matched and a close game is anticipated.

Manager George Hermann, of the Odds, is still sticking to the same five that carried him to the championship, namely: Riemer, Frankovic, Hughes, Hines and Smith. For reserve he has Scott, Penwick, Hibbs, Weidman and Sawicki. Manager Nev McGinley will start Muntzie Manczak, Ernie Birchenough, Herbie Lawrence, Joe Roe and Edmund Dugan. Waiting for a chance in the line-up will be Nelson Green, Joe McGee and Joe Gallagher.

The managers of the loop will also show the fans that they know their stuff by meeting the All-Stars. The managers' starting line-up will be: Spadaccino, Hendricks, Flatch, McGinley and Fallon. This team will be managed by Hermann. For the All-Stars, Tommy Juno will be manager, with his club being: Zeffries, Dorsey, Kleinfelder, Hart, Eddie Roe and Johnny Dougherty.

First game will begin at eight o'clock sharp.

McCLAY AND ROMANO TO GIVE RETURN BOUT

Tickets for the next amateur boxing show to be held in the Italian Mutual Aid Arena next Monday night will go on sale today according to an announcement by Charles P. Alta, St. Ann's representative to the A. A. U. The sanction for the bouts has been received by the St. Ann's organization and everything is in readiness for the affair which promises to be the best card of the season.

Match-maker Patsey Moffo is already working on the program and has already succeeded in getting two return bouts which the fans have been clamoring for. That bout between Francis McClay and Ralph Romano, two hard-hitting fools, is certain to come off as well as the return match between Junes Zeffries and Frankie Falcone.

Bouts will also be signed today for Frank Puccio, Phil Quici, Johnny Racagnano, and Sammy Baiocchi. It is the intention of Moffo to have at least eight local boys on this card.

As there will be a great demand for tickets, fans are requested to order them early by phoning 9934.

WEEKLY ATTRACTIONS AT CROYDON ARENA

Daggar A. C. will conduct amateur boxing shows weekly for the balance of the season at their Croydon Club. According to "Bill" Seibold, "we plan to use five local boys with numbers of the Nativity Catholic Club and the Kensington A. C. on our program for Wednesday night."

Lenny Dever, the lion-hearted fourth ward red-head, will battle Les Mary, of Kensington, while Dumpy Nocito faces Joe Fahey, of Nativity; Willie Leighton, Croydon flash, will tackle Al Hall, of Kensington; Joe Myers, another local favorite will fight Harry Murphy, of Philadelphia, with the balance of the program to be announced tomorrow.

servers were anticipating an immediate call for the session.

CINCINNATI, O., Mar. 23.—(INS)—One hundred East Side families evacuated their homes and downtown merchants apprehensively watched the flood-swollen Ohio River overflow its banks as the crest approached the Queen City today.

At 6.30 a. m., the Government river gauge measured a depth of 57.2 feet which was 5.2 feet above the flood stage. Slowly the water level continued to rise, with a high mark of 59 to 60 feet awaited tomorrow afternoon.

Flood waters this morning reached the top of the long sloping stone levee and made ready to inundate Commerce street along the river front.

to the hazardous condition of the Delaware Division Canal and reporting the opinion of the directors of your association to the effect that the State is responsible for the upkeep of the canal pending decision in the court relative to the ownership of the portion of the canal between Raubsville and Yardley. I presume that your association knows that, after most careful consideration by the Department of Forests and Waters and following advice of the Attorney General, the Delaware Division Canal Company was advised on October 16th that the act under which the canal was conveyed to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania was unconstitutional and everything done pursuant thereto was ineffective and void. Possession of the canal was accordingly delivered back to the Delaware Division Canal Company and said company was informed the Commonwealth expects it to perform the terms, conditions and duties imposed upon it by the Act of April 21, 1888, including particularly those duties and conditions which require the company to maintain the canal in its entirety as a public highway or waterway and to keep same up, including the public and private bridges crossing said canal, in good repair and operating condition.

Following instructions of the Attorney General, the Department of Forests and Waters withdrew its maintenance forces at the time notice was given of the transfer of the property back to the canal company.

The Commonwealth takes the position that the Delaware Division Canal Company is entirely responsible for the upkeep of the canal and the interests of the Commonwealth, and in particular the residents living in the vicinity of the canal, will be best served by the position which has been taken in the matter. We are ready scene.

and willing to agree with the Delaware Division Canal Company and the holding company that maintenance of the canal by those companies will not be taken as an admission of a faulty legal position.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) GEORGE H. EARLE.

Open Doors of Phila. Flower Show Today

When the Annual Philadelphia Flower Show opens its doors today a crescendo of color will meet the eye, for planners of the exhibit this year have attained a new and striking effect of mass color harmony never before achieved.

The central aisle, always the show's piece de resistance, will be bordered and divided by plantings of pink and white tulips, among which will grow magnolias. This gentle shading of color will all be backed by the flame of massed azaleas and the neutral grey effect of blue cedar. A jet fountain with five pools is centered in this

The show continues all week until March 28th, in Commercial Museum, 34th Street below Spruce, Philadelphia.

Large and small gardens surrounding the central court will transform the museum into a veritable fairyland of fragrant beauty. Garden gates and nooks, rose and rock gardens, wall and informal plantings, water effects and bulb plantings will take the show visitor months ahead of the calendar into deepest Spring and early Summer.

The world-renowned Widener collection of acacias will occupy a separate court of its own in a planting of heliotrope and blue plumbago, approach from the main aisle through a rose garden.

The unity and good taste of the entire plan is to be set off by arrangement, at focal points, of statuary selected for the show by the Philadelphia Art Alliance.

A total of $30,000 in cash prizes, $17,400 in the Garden Section alone, will be distributed by the Show Committee, as well as gold and silver medals. Special showings of cut flowers have been scheduled for various days throughout the week, including the finest specimens of roses, carnations, sweet peas, snapdragons, gerbera and gardenias. The large orchid section includes the finest from the collections of FitzEugene Dixon, of Elkins Park, and Mrs. William duPont, of Wilmington.

For the first time the show includes a class for garden photographs, open to both professionals and amateurs.

The Horticultural Society has encouraged exhibitors by offering cash prizes for new and novel effects, among them potted plants for window sill, window shelf arrangements and cut or potted plants for window setting, Japanese arrangement, section of a terrace garden and arrangements suggestive of Spring.

For the comfort and convenience of visitors the show has provided first class restaurant facilities, a tea room and an orchestra to play every afternoon and evening. The show opens at 1 p. m. today and continues daily until Saturday, March 28th, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 10.30 p. m.
